Maria Raquel Lucas, University of Évora (UÉ); Center for Advanced Studies in Management and Economics (CEFAGE), Portugal. mrlucas@uevora.pt

The aim and scope:

The agribusiness sector has presented positive and negative widespread impacts, in environmental and socioeconomic dimensions that affect the entire globe. In order to improve the sustainability performance of the sector and anticipate responses to contemporary constraints, the session aims to debate the systems that are already a sustainable reality, the emerging needs that must be met with new production models or whether it is a utopia to design systems that make the productive functions compatible with the environment, society and the economy. The session will thus be devoted to advances in theoretical, methodological and empirical knowledge in this context.
