The aim and scope:

The special session aims to debate the future of the European Union's Cohesion Policy post-2030 and the development of a sustainable territorial planning model in Portugal. Based on scientific contributions, the session seeks to analyse the possibilities of influencing the Portuguese negotiating position in the negotiations on the future policy instruments of the European Union. Particularly focused on innovative strategies for sustainability and territorial integration, this event provides a unique space to discuss the impact of European policies on local and regional planning, aligning national challenges with EU priorities for the future.
