The aim and scope:

Industrial tourism is a segment that offers visitors the opportunity to explore industrial facilities in operation or inoperative, as well as the production process, technologies and heritage associated with industrial activity. It is a cultural tourism that provides educational, cultural, and leisure experiences while promoting the valorisation of a region's memory, history, and industrial identity.

In this context, this special section aims to present research focusing on the relationship between industrial tourism and sustainability in urban and rural landscapes, around the world. In this session, we aim to gather data on the strategies employed and discuss new trends in studies on the proposed theme.
